

RECLAIMED WATER COMPREHENSIVE PLAN

November 4, 2011 Project Update

Project Timeline

King County is developing a Reclaimed Water Comprehensive Plan to determine if, how, when, where and by what funding mechanisms King County should expand its existing reclaimed water program over the next 30 years. King County is committed to providing a thorough, deliberative planning process that engages a broad range of interested parties and individuals.

Project Highlights

- ◊ Comment period on King County's draft reclaimed water policies extended until Friday, December 2, 2011.
- ◊ Please submit comments in writing to Steve Tolzman via regular mail or email, or online through King County's reclaimed water comprehensive plan web page.

King County has provided many opportunities for stakeholder input throughout the Reclaimed Water Comprehensive Planning process. King County originally distributed the draft reclaimed water policies on October 12, requesting comments be submitted in writing by November 18, 2011. In response to a request from the Metropolitan Water Pollution Abatement Advisory Committee for additional time to review and comment, King County is extending the public comment period on its draft reclaimed water policies until December 2, 2011.

Interested parties can submit written comments online at the County's reclaimed water comprehensive planning process project web page (<http://www.kingcounty.gov/environment/wastewater/RWCompPlan/CommentForm.aspx>) or directly to project manager Steve Tolzman via email (steve.tolzman@kingcounty.gov) or regular mail at the following address:

Steve Tolzman
Reclaimed Water Comprehensive Plan Project Manager

Submitted written comments along with the results of an analysis of reclaimed water strategies and other work to be completed in Step 4 will be used to help shape the policy recommendations that the WTD Director will submit to the King County Executive for review and consideration.

The draft policies are intended to establish guidance on any expansion of the County's reclaimed water program in the future and reflect input gathered from interested parties since 2008. They are available online at:
